Stable subcellular distribution of beta-catenin and bromodomain-containing protein 4 in the human myometrium during gestation. The subcellular localization of beta-catenin and bromodomain-containing protein 4 (BRD4), as well as that of their interacting proteins, were determined in the human myometrium at various gestational ages (5-35 weeks) by immunohistochemistry. In addition, the relationship between the localization of beta-catenin and that of BRD4 was examined. In addition to nuclear and cytoplasmic localization of beta-catenin, the perinuclear localization of beta-catenin in the smooth muscle cell plasma membranes was observed from around 16 weeks of gestation (WG). Nuclear localization of BRD4 was observed from around 10 WG. Although nuclear localization of beta-catenin and BRD4 was found in the same area in the same cell, the area of the plasma membranes of beta-catenin-positive cells was greater than that of the BRD4-positive cells from 18 WG onwards. Because cell proliferation was relatively low in the myometrium from early gestation, these results suggest that the subcellular localization of beta-catenin and BRD4 in the myometrium may be regulated through protein-protein interactions.
