Analysis of water and radionuclide distribution in seawater with respect to the analysis of water and radionuclide distribution in seawater with respect to the analysis of water and radionuclide distribution in seawater for coolant discharge from nuclear power generation plant. To analyze water and radionuclide distribution in seawater, the analysis of water and radionuclide distribution in seawater is required. However, it cannot be performed by the conventional analysis methods, such as AAS or ICP-MS, because of the influence of the presence of radioactive materials on analyses. In this study, a new method to analyze water and radionuclide distribution in seawater was developed. Seawater and coolant from nuclear power generation plants was analyzed by the newly developed methods and conventional methods. Water and radionuclide distributions in coolant were in good agreement between both of the developed and conventional methods. However, in seawater, the conventional methods gave distribution patterns different from those obtained by the developed method. It was confirmed that the developed method is more suitable for the analysis of seawater. The developed methods are expected to be used for the analysis of water and radionuclide distributions in
