FAQ

□Will I be able to see monsters in off-screen areas? Participants can in the near future. You will be able to see monsters moving about in the background. These monsters are enemies and will be able to communicate in two-way conversations. Details on communication functions and additional online elements will be revealed at a later date.

□What is known as the “L.A.B. Permission System” (L.A.B.: Limited Area Battle)? This is a permission game with strict limits. The number of people in a group affects how many people can be in an area, but the area they can access is the same, and as a result fights are predicted to be aggressive and exciting.

□What is known as the “Minion System” (Minions:

Instant Attack)?

Once a monster is in your field of view, you will be able to choose one of three things. You can activate a minion that will immediately begin an attack, automatically select a minion that will perform instant damage, or simply use your own will and attack.

□Are there effects for increasing the number of characters participating in an area?

It is not yet certain whether effects will be provided for increasing the number of characters participating in an area. However, there will be an “invite link” for an area that will also be provided.

□I can see the background images of monsters in my party, but they do not attack.

You are teleported into the field of view that is displayed on the game screen, but you cannot see the monsters in any capacity. While it is possible to see monsters that attack from off-screen areas in the first place, those areas will belong to other players.

□I can no longer hear other players' conversations in parties that I belong to.

If you are in a party and cannot hear a party member, the first user to issue commands will be displayed on-screen. If there is only the 1st and 2nd in the party, the 2nd user will be
